Superior Satiety

Studies have shown that milk protein provides satiety and stimulates enhanced fat burning when included in weight loss products. Milk protein has been shown to provide a satiating, satisfied feeling for people on restricted food, restricted calorie diets. The feeling of satiety with milk protein lasts for hours longer than other proteins.

1. Satiety through Glycomacropeptide release milk calcium for increased fat loss.

Glycomacropeptide (GMP) is released when the stomach begins digestion of the casein in milk protein. GMP has been shown to stimulate certain areas of the brain to provide a sensation of satiety. Calorie restricted subjects desire to eat less when they consume product containing milk protein.

2. Milk protein bound calcium has also been shown to increase fat loss for people on calorie restricted diets—as much as 22% greater fat loss than proteins without this bioavailable calcium. The calcium that is bound to the casein micelle in milk protein has been shown to be more bioavailable. It absorbs more efficiently into the blood and is utilized more efficiently by cells.
